In Thailand eating is an art and a major pastime, and it will be no exception for you at the Royal Park Travelodge where the best of local and international dishes are on offer. After dark, the hotel's ambiance changes with subtle shadings of light and evening hues. Every evening around the pool, a range of outdoor entertainment is provided, including singing, cabarets and cultural performances. Or if you prefer, dine in private under the stars in the intimacy of your room balcony.

The Royal Park Travelodge Resort
on beautiful Bang Tao Bay.

Creating the magic that the best holidays are made of.

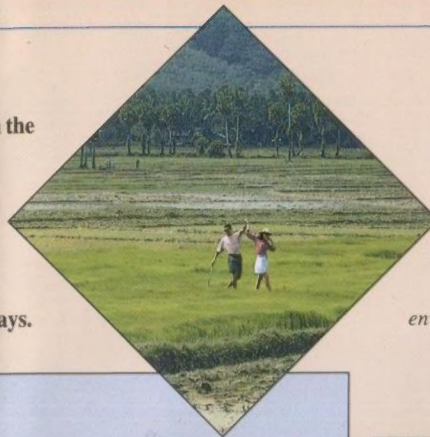

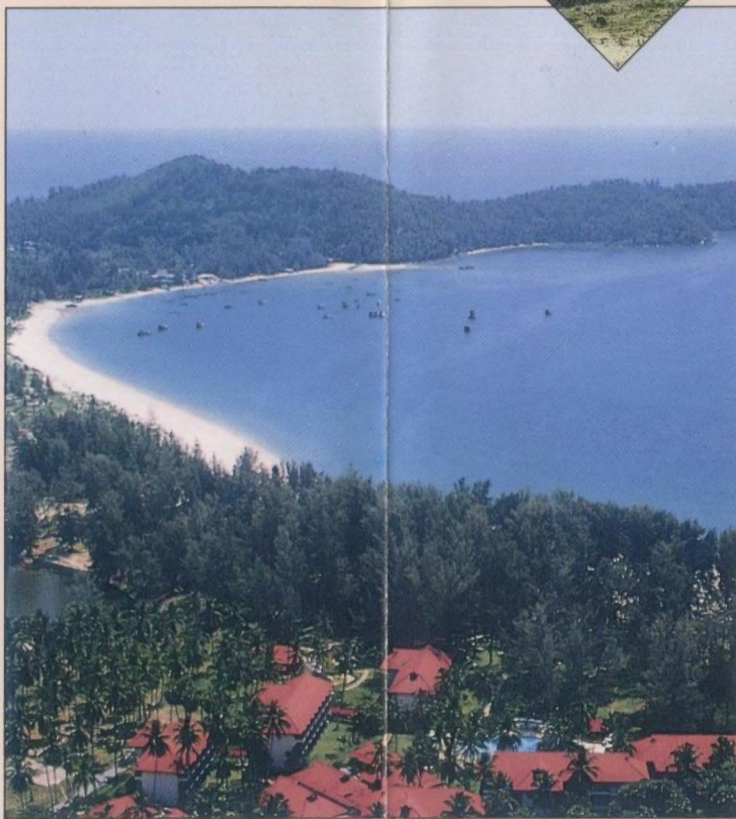

Among the island paradises of the world, few can boast the range of tropical allures or the geographic splendour that is Phuket.

Thailand itself is famed as one of Asia's most exotic lands and this small island off the southern shores is already one of its most sought-after destinations.

Beyond Bang Tao, where the Royal Park Travelodge hugs the beach, is quite another Phuket — one bustling with colours, excitement and the mystique of traditional Thailand — and all at one's fingertips. Phuket Town is a charming potpourri of the peoples of the East, the architecture they have created, and colourful bazaars that are a bargain shopper's delight. Then it's on to Patong, bustling with exciting clubs, bars and restaurants and a colourful night-life that extends into the late, late hours.

Phuket rises from the warm, calm Andaman Sea as a series of hills nestling over small bays.

Bang Tao Beach is the island's most prestigious and fashionable address, winning environmental awards.

Lush, tropical foliage spills down to meet amazingly clear waters, and punctuating this idyllic tropical meeting of green and turquoise are some of the finest, soft-sand beaches in the world.
